GENERAL CONDITIONS AND INFORMATION

What does your course cover?

- 6 weeks (4hrs) theory group class.
- 4 weeks of practical sessions.
- Presenter and program website requirements.

How Is The Presenter Training Structured?

1. Filling in the application form gives us the information we need to:
 - contact you to make final arrangements
 - confirm that you understand the timing arrangements that a presenters' course involves and that you can fit in with those arrangements
 - make arrangements for trainees who are under 18 years old. If you are under 18 you must have a responsible adult present with you at all times when you are undergoing training. If this may be a problem, please discuss this with us.
2. The course consists of a number of sessions:
 - What is Community Radio?: A two hour orientation night for all trainee presenters to explain how this station works, where it fits in the overall matrix of Australian broadcasting and what you can expect from your training.
 - Your legal responsibilities - Media Law and Codes of Practice: This is a mandatory session lasting two hours. You must attend this session in order to be able to present a program.
 - Hands on training: In the studio, usually in pairs with your trainer for two hours per week. Trainers are available on different days and at various times, even at night, so you can choose a time that suits you and your trainer.
 - Producing and presenting: A full one hour program. You are encouraged to participate in a real on-air trainees program. This helps to make you comfortable with the on-air studio panel and reduce those first show nerves. It may be with your trainer or with another presenter depending on the type of program you would like to present.
 - You make a 15 minute program demo along with your 20 - 30 sec. program promo: Submitted these on a flash drive (along with your Program Description and Presenter Bio, both 50 - 300 words) for assessment by our training committee. If your submission is accepted you can apply to present your program in the next available block. If your demo and promo aren't accepted, remember that there is no program application limit - practice some more and have another go!

What happens if I can't complete the course?

1. We don't give refunds once you've received your training manual and have started the course.
2. If you fail to show for any three scheduled sessions, you've left the course and you can't claim a refund of your course fees.
3. If your circumstances change and you can't attend arranged sessions, you can ask to be deferred to a future course and your payment will be credited to that course. We will aim to find days/times that fit your new circumstances.
4. If you don't attend the media law session for any reason you won't be able to apply for, or present a program. A special session can be arranged for an additional fee, or if you can wait until the next scheduled session you may attend that at no extra charge.

For additional inquiries or information, please contact the station.
